Terms and conditions of contract governing publication in HENRY

1. Assignment of rights

I hereby assign to the BAW – in its capacity as operator of the repository – the non-exclusive right, without any time or geographical constraints, to store the publication submitted including the corresponding metadata in electronic form and to make it available to the public online. All other exploitation rights shall continue to be held by the author or, as appropriate, the rights holder.

I am submitting my publication under a free Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 licence unless I have made any arrangements to the contrary.

I agree to the metadata being published under a Creative Commons Zero \(CC0\) licence.

2. Archiving

In its capacity as operator, the BAW may store the publication in an archive and potentially make it available to aggregators; if required, it may also convert the publication into other electronic or hardcopy formats (e.g. for accessibility purposes or a successor repository to HENRY).

3. Third-party and privacy rights

I hereby declare that I hold the rights of use for my publication and am not infringing any third-party rights. I shall notify the BAW without delay if I become aware of any infringements of third-party rights. I hereby indemnify the BAW against any third-party claims in conjunction with breaches of the law caused by the publication.

I agree to the personal information contained in the publication and in the associated metadata being made available to the public.
